Duluth Natural Surface Trails Reopen to Users

[Duluth, MN] – Duluth natural surface trails have reopened for public use thanks to cold temperatures. Temperatures during this time of the year can fluctuate so trail users are asked to observe good trail etiquette and stewardship by respecting trail closures and avoiding any wet or muddy trails. If leaving a footprint or bicycle tire imprint on the trail, it is best to turn around to reduce the potential for additional trail damage. If encountering a wet/muddy spot in an otherwise completely dry trail, it is best to go through the wet/muddy spot to prevent widening of trail.
